

Brooks W. Bateman of Pahokee was chosen by Governor Fred P. Cone as a member of the state highway department. This entire section should feel proud of the fact that Mr. Bateman was thus recognized by the new chief executive. Many, many cities larger than Pahokee were interested in securing such an appointment for some of their citizens. Mr. Bateman is not a politician. ### TEETH OR NO TEETH

Soon the Florida legislature will meet again. One of its first tasks should be to pass a "drivers' license law in an effort to cut down the terrible toll of deaths and injuries caused by automobiles in Florida. Other states which have passed such laws have reported on the average, about a 10 per cent saving of lives. If the Florida legislature again fails, in this duty, its members will have been directly responsible for not less

So far nobody seems to know very much about what's gonna happen. Under the new administration we can expect to see our state officials fired with enthusiasm or at least resigned to the situation.

And it must be kind of tough on the seal, too. Just when he gets so he can do pretty well balancin' a deficit to have a new trainar take him in charge and start try-

"That bunch went gallivanting off to California, the whole bunch of them, spending the state's money," he said, referring to the attendance of chairman and other department members and employees for a convention of the American Association of State Highway Officials.

He criticized the trip of the state highway patrolmen to Los Angeles when retiring Governor Shotts became grand exalted ruler of the Elks.
"They took 10 or 12 of them out there to ride along the highways blowing their sirens," he said.

"They had to let everybody know somebody important was coming."
Completion of the 20-mile link in road 28, would leave only 13 miles in the southern end of Broward county to complete the highway to Miami. The 20 miles will be completed, when completed, Lake Okechobee section with Fort Lauderdale and Fort Everglades.

Now necessities cost the hospital in London about $10,000,000 a year, according to estimates. Less than 10 per cent of this is recovered.

Turkey or chicken cut up and served with a cream sauce or tomato or both, which may also include pineapple, chopped olives, or small cubes of vegetables, makes a tasty supper dish. Cold chicken or turkey, sautéed in butter and skim milk with a small tumbler of wild grape jelly, served with rice, is delicious. Cold chicken and turkey put into the remains of the gravy with left-over vegetables and baked in a casserole to a bubbling stage is well worth a try.

The left-over turkey in cream sauce or gravy topped with hot biscuits might be termed a "turkey pie." Suppose we serve turkey pie. If so, make a rich biscuit dough, roll out to 3/4-inch thickness and cut with a hot round cutter and bake in a hot oven. While the biscuits are baking, brown a half cup of celery in 2 tablespoons butter. Make a cream sauce by blending 1 cup of milk with 2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons of flour. Cook until thickened, then add the celery and turkey.

Racketeers Have Many Games To Take Your Money

A timely warning against the "actor" who would prey on your feelings and purse is sounded by Edward T. Holsky, New York physician and tutor, in the current Rotarian Magazine. This type of "racketeer" is often a social psychologist. He goes to work on human sympathies to obtain just as productive as is working on man's perpetual desire to get in a lot of money by investing a little.

"It is always worth remembering," he urges, "that many charitable organizations to take care of the worthy poor. For those temporarily in distress, they are willing to lend a helping hand. If you are approached to part with your money to help someone in distress, refer them to the proper authorities. The chances are that otherwise you will yourself turn out in the end to be the real loser."

But how do these sympathy racketeers take advantage of those who wish to help their less fortunate? Dr. Podolsky cites a few examples:
The Lost Pocketbook Trick: As you are walking along the street, a woman walks up to you. Generally she looks like a widow or a respectable housekeeper. She's a past middle age and has a terribly worried expression in her face. She asks if you may speak to you for a moment. You consent. She tells you in a tone of distress she has lost her pocketbook. She lives somewhere in the suburbs. She hasn't the least idea how she is to get home; she hasn't a penny with her. "I wonder if it would be asking too much," she says, "if I asked you to lend me my fare home. I'll return the money, the moment I get home. Here's my address." She certainly looks respectable. They always do. That is part of their racket. If you are kindhearted, you will advance her the dollar or two. But that is the last you will ever see of your money. A little later this lady in distress will work the same trick on some other kind-hearted gentleman.

Helping the Poor: Mr. Lee has been knocked down by an automobile and has sustained severe injuries. He is taken to the hospital, and as soon as he is discharged he is visited at his home by a girl-talking individual who says that he represents a firm of lawyers who act for some society or other organization who are particularly interested in the poor. This man has fully investigated Mr. Lee's case and it is his belief that he can collect damages. His firm will be glad to put in a claim on Mr. Lee's behalf. Of course Mr. Lee is grateful and gives the case to the lawyer. If the man responsible for the accident pays the claim, the lawyers deduct 10 percent or more of the sum and in addition send Mr. Lee their bill or costs. If the case comes out court and Mr. Lee loses, Mr. Lee has to pay the costs of the trial. The society of course, loses nothing.

Selling Merchandise to the Dead: Mr. Krasnow is dead. A notice of his death has been published in the local papers. A few days later a man appears at his house, whose name he shows her watch and tells her that her late husband had paid $10 deposit on it. He asks what she wants to do about the balance of $20. Of course, Mrs. Krasnow reverses the memory of her dead husband and she pays the remainder. Later she learns that her late husband had no deposit on any watch, and further that the watch she bought made of tin and worth less than a dollar. There are various forms of this racket of playing on a person's benevolence. Sometimes a recent fountain pen is sent to the deceased with a $3 C.O.D. charge attached. The relatives often accept the pen, thinking that the ordering of the merchandise was the last act of the deceased.

Birds Find Refuge
In Myakka Park

Increase in Area Now
Greater Than During Past 40 Years

Mr. A. R. Edwards, an old-time resident of Sarasota county, and one of the group responsible for the establishment of the Myakka River State Park, recently stated that the bird life in the park area was more abundant than he had ever seen it in over forty years. This increase is undoubtedly largely due to the fact that since the area was secured for a park, the Florida Park Service, through the U. S. Forest Service, has protected the area from damage by fires and from molestation by man and deer. This protection was accomplished in close cooperation with the local agent of the Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, and the wild life technician of the State Park Division of the National Park Service. Local citizens, sportsmen and park visitors have enthusiastically assisted in making this park one of the most outstanding areas in the country, and as the amount of bird life is concerned, "The vast flocks of snow white birds and birds having brilliant plumage are wonderful in flight or against background of palms or lush green of the river banks."

The park is in Sarasota and Manatee counties. It embraces a considerable portion of the Myakka River, includes two large lakes and many ponds which provide excellent cover and an abundance of food for aquatic birds.

The newly constructed, paved highway from Zephyrhills to Tampa via Thompkins, passes through one edge of beautiful Hillsborough River State Park. The new road makes this delightful scenic area accessible to the people of Tampa, neighboring communities and winter visitors. Heretofore the Upper Hillsborough River has only been accessible to hardy campers and fishermen who were not afraid of getting stuck in deep mud during dry weather or in river hammock mud in wet weather.

Although the park is still under construction it is very popular for visitors who enjoy its sub-tropical scenery, the river rapids, the trails, fishing and picnic facilities. The Suburban Hygiene Co. is working on the area under the direction of the Florida Park Service, an agency of the Florida Board of Forestry. The State Park Division of the National Park Service is cooperating in the making of the area into one of the most delightful state parks in the south.

Colleen Moore Doll
House Aids Sick

Costs More Than $435,000
And New Wonders
Being Added

Anguish of body or mind often arouses the human sympathy and understanding which, enriching the soul of the sufferer, redounds to the benefit of mankind. Such was Colleen Moore's reaction to months of agonizing suffering from a bone fracture, which threatened to leave her a cripple for life, that the gave of her purse and deepest thought to plan a way to relieve the condition of thousands of her fellow-creatures doomed to constant pain and mental torture.

It was during her long convalescence and when advised that she would regain her strength and normal bodily activity that she dreamed of ways of raising funds to bring aid in comfort to crippled children.
Commenting on Miss Moore's plans and her investment of nearly a half million dollars, The Masonic Chronicle (Chicago), in its issue of November 28, 1936, states: "She wove into it (her dream) the fantasy and whimsy of the child she endowed it with the fabulous grandeur of the fairy tales of all times; she added to it all the marvels of modern science, gave it the breath of life, and lo! the pumpkin coach of Cinderella's fairy godmother, it became a real and tangible thing—Colleen Moore's Doll House, an enchanted palace destined to bring suffering children of the world."

"Completed, the Doll House has already cost more than $435,000, and new wonders are being added constantly. For over fifteen months this enchanted castle has been shown in many of the larger cities of the country. Although Mrs. Moore is, quite properly, being compensated for each showing, no contract for such an exhibition is entered into without a clause in which she requires the pledge that approximately 50 per cent of the gross receipts shall be given by the exhibitor to institutions and organizations dedicated to the care and comfort of crippled and destitute children."

During these fifteen months in which the house has toured the country from coast to coast, covering 25 states, it has been shown in 1,000 places. The Doll House is now being displayed for the second time in many of the larger centers of North America, and as the people learn the purpose, for which it was created, its exhibition for even the third or fourth time will doubtless be requested.

It was shown for the second time in Philadelphia at Gimbel's department store some months ago, where, although an admission fee of only ten cents in the daytime and fifteen cents at night was charged, a substantial amount went to worthy institutions in that city for crippled children, among which was the Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children.
Describing the Doll House, Mr. W. Freehand Kendrick, chairman of the Board of Trustees, Shriner's Hospital for Crippled Children, said, in part:

"It is a beautiful, fascinating miniature Fairy Palace, designed to furnish to scale. It seems to me that nothing which could be included within its walls has been left out. This rare and interesting work of excellence in design, structure and furnishings. Instance, the crystal chandelier hanging in the drawing room is made from Miss Moore's diamond necklace. Two little chairs in the same room, supposed to be tapestry, are made from diamonds, emeralds and rubies, inlaid in the seats and backs. A tiny pipe organ in the music room, built to scale; continually playing, while a well-furnished library contains miniature books which have been autographed by many celebrated authors as a compliment to Miss Moore. These and many other wonders including tiny dishes in the kitchen, a radio, dressing gowns and robes, inlaid in the exquisites arrangement, and tiny but beautiful draperies, decorations, wall pictures, musical instruments, etc., contribute toward a most wonderful and interesting exhibit."

"The Doll House has been exhibited all over North America."

New Governor—

said. "It just ties up my administration."

"They'll have a hard time carrying out those contracts," he added, "if they are illegal or if the work to be done is found not to be the most necessary."

A trip of State Highway Patrolmen to Los Angeles when Shotts became grand exalted ruler of the Elks came under Cose's fire. "They took 10, or 12 of them out there to ride along the highway blowing their sirens," he declared. "They had to let every body know somebody important was coming."

The new governor said he favored the Florida ship canal. "I'm for that and for every big thing that will help Florida," he said. "The canal would be the best thing we ever had. It would be a fine attraction for tourists. Why everybody would come to see it like they go to Niagara Falls."

"It would be of incalculable commercial value, besides the $150,000,000 they would spend building it. Of course, there's nothing to that stuff about it hurting the state's water supply."

He said he would wage war on bootmakers. He declared they deprive the state of $1,500 a day during the racing season by handing $50,000 in bets outside the legal pari-mutuel system.

The state levies a three per cent tax on lawful wagering at race tracks.

It is up to each section of the state, the governor asserted, to decide how it wants to attract tourists.

"If Miami wants racing and gambling, that's their business," was the way he put it. "I'm not going to try to tell them what they should do for tourists."

As for slot machines—"that's a thing that's gone out already. I suppose the legislature will attend to whatever remains to be done in due time."

Fifty of the state's 67 counties voted in November to ban the coin devices. Licenses then in effect cannot be cancelled, however, and the machines may be operated until next October unless the legislature takes a hand.

from Columbia, 22 from Hillsborough and 17 from Duval.

The inauguration ball last night concluded the day-long ceremonies incident to inducting a new governor into office. Cose and his wife led the grand march.

Every section of the state was represented in the long parade. Center of interest was a band of Seminole Indians in native attire led by Chief Billy Bowlegs.
